$200 Is Received Into Polio Fund

National Foundation
Advances Local Chapter
Money To Aid Patients

A check for $200 was delivered to the Caldwell County Chapter of The National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis Saturday, according to John E. Young, chapter chairman.

The money, which was advanced to the chapter by the Foundation's national headquarters, will be used to pay current treatment costs for Caldwell county's three polio patients now receiving financial assistance from the Foundation. The amount of the advanced money was estimated on a 60-day anticipated expense basis and at the expiration of the two-month period, the chapter's finances will again be studied to determine whether or not another advance will be necessary, it was explained.

"We are determined that every polio patient in Caldwell county will receive the very finest medical and hospital care available," Mr. Young said. "And until after our own March of Dimes next January, we will have to draw upon funds from the National Foundation's Epidemic Aid Fund."

"After the campaign, however, 50 per cent of all contributions received in this county will remain here to wage the local fight against polio."

The National Foundation recently changed the structure of the organization by closing the state office and organizing county chapters throughout the state.

Enrollment Dates In Hospital Plan Are July 13-14

Office To Be Stationed
At The K. U. Building;
Individual Enrollment
Open To All Residents

Caldwell county residents are reminded today that Friday and Saturday, July 13-14, will be the last dates for individuals to enroll in the Blue Cross-Blue Shield hospital and surgical-medical plans by J. Ed Wade, district director for the voluntary insurance.

During this period, Caldwell county will be open for individual enrollment in which all residents of the county may participate. An office will be provided at the Kentucky Utilities building on Main street until noon Saturday. A $2 enrollment fee will be charged with each application, it was explained.

During this enrollment all persons under 66 years of age, in good health and not able to join the plan through a group, may enroll in Blue Cross-Blue Shield and pay subscription charges by mail every three months, it was stated.

This enrollment, Mr. Wade explained, is in keeping with the aims of the voluntary health insurance plans to offer the low cost advantages to as broad an area of the population as possible.

Group membership has been, and will continue to be, the backbone of the Blue Cross-Blue Shield plan, Wade added. "It is through such wholesale enrollments that the community non-profit plans can have some assurance of an average utilization of services by subscribers. The group low rates are based on such experience," he said.

This individual enrollment is not available to those, who with their fellow employees, are able to form groups and gain such advantages as lower rates and who are not obligated to make statements regarding state of health. Rather, it is made so that such persons as the self-employed, retired, those not working or otherwise do not fit into any group category may, nevertheless, gain valuable protection and security," Wade concluded.

At the present time, Hopkinsville is the nearest mill for storing government wheat, he added.

QUESTION:
The July issue of Nation's Business says that we are in the midst of — flatation. In — for some. De — for others. Peaks and valleys, that's business outlook for the rest of 1951. In case of a cease fire order in Korea do you think "Inflation" or "Deflation" would predominate in the economy of Caldwell county?

ANSWERS:
Grayson Harralson: I think for a period of perhaps 90 days we would see a decided inflation in our local economy. After then, or a slightly longer period, we will see a leveling off of wages and prices to a more stable point. I do not think we will ever see the economy return to the low level of some former years.

Joe P. Wilcox: Neither one in particular. Our business for the past six years has shown a moderate but steady increase. This, I think is due to giving the best merchandise possible for the price asked. While prices have risen sharply, I think our economy in this county has maintained a fairly even balance in most phases.

Sam Steger: A slight deflation. A cease fire order in Korea will stop scare buying and the war effort will be slackened somewhat. This slackening will not be great enough, however, to make a great deal of difference in our economy in the long range picture.

Hillery Barnett: If a cease fire order is issued I think there will definitely be a period of deflation with prices tapering off. What caused the current surge of inflation was largely due to scare buying and the hoarding of merchandise by a few people. I don't look for any drastic price reductions, but think all the scare buying will stop and prices will reach a sensible level.

Maybe The Best Is To Be

Browning wrote the familiar words, "Grow old along with me, the best is yet to be." There are those who are skeptical about this, who think of old age as a period of increasing ills, of incapacity, of mere watchful waiting for the end. Especially, ordinarily men of mere watchful waiting for the end. Especially, ordinarily men of mere watchful waiting for the end. Especially, ordinarily men of mere watchful waiting for the end. Especially, ordinarily men of mere watchful waiting for the end.

Recent experiments of a strictly scientific kind, have exposed the fallacy of believing that old people can be of no more service, that memories fail, that mental vigor is impaired, that fresh learning is beyond their reach, and that they can perform very few important tasks efficiently.

In fact, it has been found that in studies older people make more rapid progress than younger men and women, and that the faculty of memory remains as good as in earlier years. Old people who are employed often outdistance younger ones who work at the same bench or carry on like activities.

As the proportion of older people tends steadily to increase as life expectancy is lengthened, these experiments, and their results, are of the greatest importance to the country, and to millions of individuals.

The trouble is that older people become obsessed with the idea that age is always, and inescapably, a serious handicap; that with advancing years men and women must be content to step aside and become inactive. Nothing worse could happen to them. Retirement, a retirement which imposes idleness, of brain or hand, of itself is one of the chief factors in the aging process. Men who close an active and productive life by sitting down to "take it easy," who fold their hands and become somnolent, and who cease to grow mentally, of course become senile. Their apathy and lethargy induce senility. The less they do the less they are capable of doing.

Manufacturers are finding older men to be even more efficient, and more reliable, than younger employees. Their skills are greater, their dependability increases, and all the while their physical and mental health is preserved, and even improved as science learns how to deal with the maladies of age.

More Taxes

Seems like with all the high-powered brain power we have in Congress, or are supposed to have, that body could come up with a better measure for raising additional tax revenue than the one approved by a House committee.

Chief plank in that measure is an increase in personal income taxes of 12½ per cent, followed by additional levies on automobiles, gasoline, cigarettes and liquor. The income tax has already reached a point where it is stifling initiative, where it keeps businessmen from expanding their operations. They reason, and rightly, that if they invest their money for plant or business expansion—which incidentally would provide more jobs—and lose it, they lose it all, whereas if they happen to make some money Uncle Sam steps in and takes most of it.

Automobiles and gasoline are already taxed all out of proportion to the amount they should, in justice, be required to yield. The tax on automobiles started, way back yonder, when they were considered luxury only. It is not necessary to present an argument here to the effect that they have, years ago, ceased to come wholly in the luxury classification. Gasoline is taxed heavily for road building purposes, with which we have no quarrel, but we do not think additional levies should be made on it to go into the general fund. We do not blame the automobile industry and the oil group for fighting these proposed new levies vigorously.

In regard to the increased taxes on liquor and cigarettes we have no objection. However, we merely point out that in taxing any item there comes a time when the point of diminishing returns is reached. We suspect that it has already been reached in the case of liquor, with moonshine stills and bootleggers on the increase all over the land and that the present rates may yield at least as much, if not more, than the additional levy would bring in. So, with cigarettes, we haven't yet heard of them being illicitly manufactured and bootlegged but they may be if the Congress doesn't adopt a more realistic approach to the matter.

All this is not to say that additional sources of revenue do not need to be explored if the preparedness program is to be put on something like a pay as you go program, even if waste and unessential expenditures, which account yearly for billions of the taxpayers' money, were eliminated or reduced. We are merely pointing out that you can ride a willing horse to death. And that there are dozens, yes hundreds, of other sources of revenue that the august Representatives could find if they were not so set in the routine of meeting, making a motion to increase levies already in effect, and adjourning.

If The Fighting Ends

You wouldn't think that we would be so stupid; but, it appears to be almost certain that, if the fighting in Korea should end, even temporarily, our Congress would cease to make any effort to stop the inflationary trend. Actually the danger of an explosive inflation is greater than the danger from the continuation of the Korean war. Considering the whole field of our fight against Communism, Korea is only a small incident and what happens there will have small effect on the economic picture at home. A stable economy at home is a stern necessity and our Congress will be derelict in its duty if it doesn't pass some effective measures to slow down inflation.

A Worthy Honor Bestowed

In the formation of a National Citizens Committee for John Sherman Cooper for President, as announced in Louisville, brings to the fore a movement by the progressive element of the Republican party that gives hope that that Grand Old Party will emerge from the fog of stand-pat-ism and the reactionary element that seems to have dominated it for so long, and become again a party of progress and liberalism.

All Kentucky is proud of John Sherman Cooper and for the solid common sense attitude he has assumed during the few short years of his national service. He has proven his ability and understanding of the vital issues before the nation and cooperated with those who have such a common outlook that see above party alignment a higher aspect of service to the nation and its well-being. He is a natural leader among men. Solid and sound in his convictions and with an unprejudiced mind that sees above the foibles of party, a higher duty than a regularity that enforces objectives on issues planned by selfish individuals for selfish purposes.

For the good of the nation and the well being of our people, it is heartening that such a movement has been put in motion to present to the country such a worthy son as John Sherman Cooper for the Presidency. He is in every way qualified and worthy of the honor and would bring distinction and confidence to his party if given the nomination. We believe all Kentucky would welcome the presentation of Mr. Cooper to the Republican Convention in Chicago next year, and that party could enhance its chances of success to a large degree by nominating him as its national leader.

Little Chips

Chances are you were on at found a chicken brooder all lighted up with 100 watt bulbs so I go and you still are recovering from out and put 25 watt globes in an overdose of sunburn, chigger bites and indigestion. I suffered we get up the next morning and find a hundred and thirty some odd dead chickens," Julian says. Amly blamed him and put Julian in the doghouse just because she got the idea that the light bulbs were too small and the chickens smothered themselves to death looking for something to eat.

Although I am the young faithful of a seven-month-old girl, I never realized until last week the worry that fathers with daughters sometimes have to bear. I even liked the idea of being the father of a baby girl until I heard a man on the street here in Princeton tell how he had five daughters and four sons-in-law and he had $500 waiting for the man who would take the last daughter off his hands. Since I'm a newspaper man I should have suggested a classified ad as a way of finding a woman to earn like most good women, just doesn't know how to turn lights off. "I went home one night and in.

Julian Littlepage will agree with me that women can sometimes get the oddest notions for any creature on earth. Take for an example the result of his attempt to cut down on his electric bill. Julian says his wife, Amy, like most good women, just doesn't know how to turn lights off. "I went home one night and in.

"Green Pastures"

By Gordon Wilson, Ph. D. (Western State College)

It would be a blind person who could not see how very much the surface of the fields in my part of the state has improved within the last few years. The long, wasteful exploitation of the soil seems well on the way out. What used to be smooth stretches of good soil became eroded and useless. For years thousands of acres were eyesores to any one who loved to see vegetation and not red earth.

With the coming of the emphasis on green pastures has come a reawakened conscience as to man's responsibility to nature. Some of the very worst sinkholes and hillsides are now covered again with nature's own green. Places that would not have provided a mouthful of edible grass for a cow or sheep now are knee-deep in luscious vegetation. And fields that used to be unknown to birds unless they carried their own provisions with them are now inhabited again, after all these years of man-made deserts.

By no means have all the ditches vanished and all the poor old hillsides again been covered, but there are enough of them now re-claimed that even the most skeptical can see that it can be done. And the enthusiasms shown for clothing the naked earth are good to know.

Not long ago, while on my way home from a commencement address I picked up an elderly man who was waiting for the bus. All the way back to town we talked about the effectiveness of pastures. He said he was glad that he had lived long enough to see the miracle accomplished of covering the bare spots and making even the eroded hillsides produce. Unlike many older people, he could recall when forty bushels of corn to the acre was something to brag about; now, he says, his poorest acres produce that much or more. And he showed a kind of fervor when he told of the pastures that he had and the fine cattle on which he depended for a living. I could not help thinking of a time not too long ago when the general rule on the farm seemed to be to skim all the cream of the land off and then move on to fresher fields.

There has too often been a tendency to glorify the pioneers, forgetting how wasteful and cruel to nature they were. Pioneer life was no Sunday School picnic, I know, as I shared some experiences not too far away from earlier times. But the unplanned farming of the time has certainly created some problems that it will take generations to settle, even with all hands working at the problems all the time.

Where are the springs of yesterday as well as the snows that Francois Villon asked about? Many a spring, that I once knew as a year-round source of water is now just a wet-weather spring, for the sources of its water have been ruined. The old man I mentioned told me with a great deal of fervor that he could tell a considerable difference between the size of the streams on his farm in dry weather now after his green pastures program was put into effect and before. Maybe it will not be too long until some of the brooks, even in my own limestone area, may flow throughout the year. Soil washed away is unreclaimable, but with careful cover crops and attention paid to conserving moisture there may well be a restoration of some of the fields that used to contribute their share of feeding man and beast.

It is not merely the actual covering the nakedness of the earth that I rejoice over. The change in the minds of people is greater.

Washington Letter

(By Jane Eads)

Washington — Some of the urgent questions parents have been asking Dr. John Fulton, dental consultant in the U. S. Children's Bureau, about tooth care for children will be answered in a new bureau pamphlet coming out this fall.

Dr. Fulton is being assisted by Children's Bureau specialists and researchers, and tells me he doesn't pretend to pose as "the great Llama and international authority." However, here are some things you're likely to find in the new bulletin:

1. A good time to get children set with the family dentist is at the age of three. That's the time the average child has all his baby teeth in position. Since these are subject to decay, they ought to be looked after. If youngsters get acquainted with the dentist before they get cavities, bringing pain and discomfort, they're less likely to build up fears about the man.

2. The practice of painting fluorides on teeth at the age of three, seven, 10 and 13 years, roughly covering the eruption of all new teeth, is carried out now in many communities across the country and some states are attempting to set up the program on a public health scale.

"Fluoride painting is not a 100 per cent cure-all," Dr. Fulton explains, "but when it has been practiced consistently, scientists have noted 40 per cent fewer new decayed spots in teeth."

3. There is not a lot of evidence of the real value of brushing against tooth decay, but certain experiments have brought interesting data to light. Results of one two-year experiment, covering 2,000 children in Peoria, Ill., public schools, showed that tooth-brushing with ordinary powders and pastes resulted in a six per cent reduction in decay over a group which brushed their teeth at home without instruction. Another group using ammoniated dentifrices showed a 18 per cent reduction.

"We get a lot of questions on crooked teeth," Dr. Fulton says, "particularly about thumb-sucking and finger-sucking as possible causes."

This is a touchy subject, he says. Pediatricians and psychiatrists seem to agree that thumb-sucking gives rest and comfort to kids, but "Orthodontists react to his theory violently. However, the practice is not actually harmful in the very young, especially under five years. After that age it might cause some difficulty."

Dr. Fulton says that straightening and other corrections for teeth that don't close properly are usually started after a child gets his permanent teeth, around the age of 12 in most cases.

How to make Wise Tracks to a Beauty

How do you buy a new car?

Are you one of those people who buy on love at first sight?

Or do you check cars feature for feature, price for price—then pick the one that gives you the most for your money?

Whichever you are, we'd like to suggest that you come in and see our 1951 Buicks.

It's a sure bet you'll go for the swift, smart look of a SPECIAL, SUPER or ROADMASTER—fall seriously in love with the pace and power of its bonnet-filling engine.

And it's a cinch you'll go for the room and richness of those Buick interiors—the serene smoothness of Dynaflo Drive* and all-coil springing.

But don't let your emotion be the only judge—get the practical picture too.

Note that the power that gives you such a big kick here comes from Buick's famed valve-in-head Fireball Engine—which means you get a lot of miles from each gallon of gas you buy.

Note that the silken ease you enjoy with Dynaflo* goes hand in hand with real money savings in maintenance costs.

Above all, note what a Buick's price tag includes—how much more sheer automobile you get in a Buick than the same money would buy elsewhere.

How about making tracks to our showroom right soon—checking thoroughly into the matter—and see if you don't fall in love with a smart-buy Buick?

Tips On Traveling With The Children

(By David Taylor Marke)

Do you enjoy taking your chil- dren traveling with you?

True, traveling with them is quite a large order, says Helen Stanick, homemaker authority of Cornell University. And with vacations coming along, more and more families will be faced with the problem of amusing the small fry on long trips. It can be done, she says.

Miss Stanick offers the exam- ple of the Smiths who had three children, Patty, 6, Peggy, 3, and Scotty, 18 months.

They began by mentally pre- paring the children as gently as possible for the coming trip, starting a few days in advance. Then Dad prepared the car. He built a platform to fit between the front and rear seats. This brought the level of the floor up about eighteen inches.

The extra flooring, he figured, would eliminate nasty falls and provide more comfortable sleep- ing space in the back. In addi- tion, he padded the platform, door and window handles to cut down bruises and bumps.

Next on their agenda was the packing. They tried to put every- thing in the trunk except for one small suitcase which they put in the front seat. This small suit- case contained diapers, baby food, bottles, towel and wash- cloth, thermos of water, and necessary clothing changes.

Since a day of traveling seems awfully long to youngsters, a box of toys of their own selection was added to the back seat. Young- sters cannot understand time and distance, and modern cars go so fast that parents can only point out a few prominent objects to occupy the children's eyes and minds, so the Smiths kept the back seat of the car as free as possible of luggage. This gave the children room to play with their toys. The parents packed their picnic basket in the trunk, away from the prying fingers . . . but they always kept fruit and cook- ies on call.

The parents, realizing they were traveling with three growing children, considered the young- sters' schedules, and fit the trip in where it would cause the least disturbance. Thus, they began their trip after the baby's bath at one o'clock, so that Scotty could take his nap on the first leg of the journey. As planned, Scotty dropped off to sleep with his head on Mother's lap. And with minor interruptions, the girls played quietly in the back of the car until Scotty finished his hour-and-a-half nap. Then another hour passed peacefully with some refreshments and some seat-swapping.

About this time, the youngsters became restless. But the Smiths were prepared with a number of gadgets. One of the children's favorites was a bag of "surprises" . . . nothing more than a paper bag with balloons, tracks, and lollipops. These surprises were awarded every half-hour or every fifty miles.

Of course, the prizes were given out in triplicate!

Then, at meal time, Dad and Mother found it best to have a picnic meal, since the weather was warm. This gave the children a chance to run and play off some of their excess energy.

On this trip, the Smiths stopped by a Vermont mountain stream to wash up and prepare the children for bed. Patty, the 6-year-old, had the raised, padded platform between the seats, and Scotty shared the front. When the fam- ily reached their destination, 400 miles away, the children, still asleep, were transferred from the car to beds without waking.

Study To Be Made Of State Legal Procedure

A thorough-going study of all phases of Kentucky legal procedure is being undertaken by the Kentucky Judicial Council to the end that remedial steps may be taken to improve judicial admin- istration, Amos H. Eblen, Council Secretary, has disclosed.

Eblen explained that the Council is studying all phases of Ken- tucky's judicial procedure, in the hope that the next General As- sembly will act to remedy any defects that may be found.

"The study includes what the Courts are doing, how well they are functioning and what can be done to improve them," he said. He added that it was hoped that out of the survey being made might come intelligent answers and suggestions on remedial measures.

New suits filed in the circuit courts far exceed the number that are disposed of by these bodies, which makes for congested dock- ets.

He pointed out that last July there were 34,944 pending cases in the circuit courts of the state. From July 1 to October 1 there were 10,069 new cases filed, while only 7,252 were removed

Safety Is Urged During Vacation

By Dr. W. L. Cash
(County Health Officer)

A vacation should be a carefree time, but it should not be a time for carelessness, or tragedy may result. Health Department statis- tics show that accidents take more lives during vacation months than at any other time of the year, and holidays, such as Fourth of July and Labor Day, annually take too large a toll of lives.

Holidays mean crowded high- ways and crowded highways may mean danger ahead. If you are planning an automobile trip this summer, be sure to have your car from the dockets by trial or dis- missal.

"These figures clearly show," said Eblen, "that our court dock- ets are congested and that the trial judges have been unable to keep abreast of the new cases filed."

Now that school is out and you no longer need to slow up for school cross walks you may think the need to watch out for chil- dren in the road has lessened. Actually, the reverse is true.

With boys and girls out of school there are more ball games and other sports going on in which children may dart out suddenly into the path of your car. These and many other situa- tions call for caution. When driv- ing along streets where children are playing, always slow to a speed which permits instant stop- ping.

A great deal has been said about driver safety, but the pe- destrian also needs to observe certain rules. Crossing streets at corners, waiting for the green light, looking both ways, and walking instead of running, are practices which can prevent many accidents involving pedestrians.

SCHOOL WITHOUT PUPILS

Dallas — (AP) — Here's a school that has no vacation for its pupils. It has no pupils. This penthouse school perched atop a building at Southern Methodist University is used by Prof. R. L. Biesele, Jr., in research sponsored by Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass Co., to provide information to architects and educators on best methods of daylighting classrooms to assure good vision for pupils.

The daylighting program is being conducted in a 32-foot square completely equipped classroom which is oriented so its windows face the cardinal points of the compass. The ceiling is adjustable in height and movable partitions can make any one side of the room the one open to the daylight. The room is complete even to chalk-boards, desks and pin-up display areas. Instruments record changes in light and brightness for all conditions of daylight for any hour of the day and for any day of the year.

Suggestions For The Prevention Of Bloat In Cattle

By R. A. Mabry
(County Agent)

(Prepared by M. E. Weeks, head of Agronomy Department; F. E. Hull, Animal Pathology Department; W. P. Garrigus, associate of the Experiment Station in charge of Research, University of Kentucky.)

Bloat in livestock has been a serious worry to farmers and county agents in much of Kentucky this spring. Some stock raisers and others have been especially critical of Ladino clover in this connection, and many have had a considerable dampening of their enthusiasm for improved pastures. Reports indicate that some farmers are plowing up their pastures or even applying 24-D to try to kill out the clover. This reaction is unwarranted and unnecessary in any well-planned grassland program. In view of these developments a general re-

Roses Bloom When The Bloom Buds Are Removed

Hybrid tea roses will bloom in the fall if the gardener will pinch off the bloom buds during July and August, says Prof. N. R. Elliott, specialist in horticulture at the College of Agriculture and Home Economics, University of Kentucky. This will conserve the strength of the plants, and they will have lots of bloom in September and October.

Seed pods of lilacs likewise should be removed at this time, said Mr. Elliott.

In spite of experiences of farmers and livestock men for centuries, and considerable research over many years, very little is known about either the cause or relief of bloat. Under certain conditions in ruminants, fermentation in the animal's paunch of younger, more tender forages, in either dry feeds or pastures, causes an extremely rapid production of gas, mostly carbon dioxide. Gas is produced so rapidly that it cannot escape through the gullet, and the animal bloats.

JAMES M. LASSITER

Candidate For

STATE SENATOR

I am taking this method of formally announcing my candidacy for the Democratic nomination for STATE SENATOR from the Third Senatorial District, of which Caldwell County is a part, subject to the action of the Democratic primary on Saturday, August 4th. This is the first time that I have sought election to any public office. I am a native and resident of Calloway County, being a practicing attorney in Murray. I am a graduate of Murray State College and of the University of Kentucky College of Law. I am a veteran with four years service in the Army during World War II.

I believe that I am qualified to represent our District in the General Assembly. Should you be so kind as to elect me, I pledge to do everything possible to continue the progress which has been made in our public schools and colleges, rural roads, public welfare services and all other activities for which our tax money is spent.

I have already met and talked with many of you personally, and I will see many more of you before election day. To those that I may be unable to meet, I would be most happy for you to inquire of your own acquaintances who may know me personally and are familiar with my qualifications for this office.

I earnestly hope that you will give me this opportunity to serve you. Your vote and support will be greatly appreciated.

Sincerely,
James M. Lassiter

FARM NEWS

Frequently prompt action with a tractor would save the animal. Other methods of treatment have been proposed but none is absolutely reliable.

The best means of prevention involve the over-all management of both livestock and pastures. In managing the herd the following practices should be observed: (1) always use care in turning livestock on pastures in the spring; (2) make sure the animals are full of hay before they are turned on pasture, and keep good hay where they can feed on it at any time during the grazing season; (3) keep plenty of loose salt and clean drinking water before the animals at all times (not just while they are on pasture); and (4) watch very carefully for evidence of bloat and take the animals off the pasture for a time if they do start to bloat, then turn them back in a few days, watching carefully for recurrence, and again filling the animals with grass or hay before they are turned on the offending pasture.

Any of the more palatable succulent forages and especially the legumes may cause bloat, though they do not always do so. Experience of farmers indicates that alfalfa, red clover, and the white clovers are especially apt to cause it. There is little or no reason to believe that Ladino clover is worse than any of the other white clovers when conditions are right, all cause bloat. Older sweet clover and lespedeza are least apt to cause it, apparently. In Kentucky we do not know much about birdsfoot trefoil but reports would place it along with sweet clover and lespedeza. Judgment must be reserved on this point until a later time. It is well to remember, however, that any of the forage grasses and legumes can cause bloat in some animals and under certain conditions.

Many pasture men have felt that bloat could be held down somewhat if the proper ratio of grasses to legumes could be maintained in the mixture. This is very difficult to accomplish in a pasture program because certain seasons are more favorable to one or the other plant. Further, it cannot be foretold what the right ratio of grass to legume should be.

At present there can be no assurance that bloat will be controlled entirely by any particular pasture or livestock management practice; but best farm management should indicate that the farmer make an effort to have several pastures with different combinations of grasses and legumes in each. From an agronomic and nutritional standpoint this is always a recommended practice, and it is probable that not all combinations will cause bloat at the same time.

Caldwell Farmers Study Problems Of Irrigation System

By Oliver C. Alcock
(Soil Conservation Service)

SCS Engineers H. D. McMurtry and T. D. Humphreys were in the county this week to study with John Mahan and J. B. Shrewsbury problems of installing irrigation systems on their farms.

W. P. Oldham, chairman of the Caldwell County Soil Conservation District supervisors, says plans are being made by the supervisors for a trip in July or August to visit some irrigation systems already in operation.

Land owners who would like to go on this trip should let it be known at the SCS headquarters in the court house.

CONSERVATION AIR TOUR

Would you like to go on a conservation air tour?

The air tours nearest to Caldwell county are to be held at the Sturgis, Ky., airport on August 21 and at the Mayfield airport on August 28. Three other tours are to be held in the state this summer.

The tours have been so designed as to include aerial views of good soil conservation practices, reforestation, water conservation and, also, land that is eroding badly because of the lack of conservation measures.

CONSERVATION CONTESTS
MONEY, MONEY, to be given away. $15,000 will be awarded to winners of two soil conservation contests.

The winner of the Tom Wallace Soil and Water, Forest and Wildlife Conservation Contest, sponsored by the Courier-Journal, The Louisville Times and Radio Station WHAS, will earn $250.00. The winner must be a district operator who establishes the highest per cent of his conservation farm plan during 1951. Smaller awards will be given.

The winner of the Dow Chemical Company Conservation Contest will earn $500.00 for a twenty minute speech on "My Soil Conservation District."

Contact the SCS and FMA Office in the court house for information.

LAND MAPS RECEIVED
Land capability maps have been received for the following farms: L. C. Son, Crider community; Shelby Asher, Shady Grove; J. W. Quinn, Princeton; L. W. Kimmer, Fredonia; F. N. Adams, Hopson, and Gerald Childress, Liberty.

Plants Worth Billion Move To State In 1951

Nearly a billion dollars' worth of new industry has come to Kentucky or made commitments to move to the state since the first of the year, the state Agricultural and Industrial Development Board has revealed.

The announcement is contained in a report prepared for Gov. Lawrence W. Wetherby. Some $66,000,000 in new industry has been obtained directly through activity of the board, according to the report.

Topping the list of new industries are the $500,000,000 Atomic Energy plant near Paducah and the $300,000,000 General Electric plant in Louisville. Listed also are 13 other industries whose value range from $75,000 to $10,000,000.

In citing the work of the Development Board, George W. Hubley, Jr., executive director, said that the annual payroll for eleven industries that the board worked with directly is expected to total nearly $13,000,000.

The director said that the industrial expansion is not due to a wartime boom but that the plants are permanent with plans to turn out peace time goods after war orders slacken.

Value of new plants in 1950 totaled $35,000,000, the report said.

GEORGE OVERBEY ANNOUNCES FOR RE-ELECTION

People Of The Third District Of

During the next four years, I want to help continue the progress and improvements I believe our State Government has made in the fields of Agriculture, State Parks System, tourist trade, schools and colleges, teachers' pay, highways including state, federal, and rural roads, Old Age Assistance, Social Security benefits to City, State and County officials and employees, unemployment benefits, welfare benefits, and other branches of Government. If you believe that experience is a good teacher, then I believe I can even better serve you during a second term.

I am not a member of any political faction nor obligated to any special interests. At the 1948 Session I voted against liquor industry's bill to weaken the local option laws, and in the future I will again vote against any bill that would be to the detriment of the people in my senatorial district.

I am asking that the voters in this district give me an opportunity to faithfully serve you and continue my work in the Kentucky Senate for all the people in the "Fighting Third District."

Sincerely yours,
Signed: GEORGE E. OVERBEY

GRAND CENTRAL STATION ...at the turn of the lane

Lars Olsen has often said, "Those New York folks could get along without Grand Central Station before Lars Olsen could get along without his barn!"

And Lars really has a point. For his barn is the throbbing pulse of the Olsen farm. Day by day, out of it and into it move his livestock, his equipment, and the fruits of his labor. It is the hub of his own world of industry and commerce.

But Lars has also remarked, "We Olsens could get along without our barn before we could get along without our church!"

And Lars is serious! He has learned that a man's religion is the power in his life, that Christian habits and ideals give meaning and purpose to his efforts and his achievements.

THE CHURCH FOR ALL... ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

JUST AN IDLEWILD RUMOR: Actress Elizabeth Taylor is met
Howard Taylor, Jr., (center) as she arrives from Los Angeles. She is on her way to England to make a movie. Meeting between Elizabeth and Clift came about because he just "happened" to come to the airport, he explained when asked about romance.
Elizabeth's brother, an Army sergeant who is leaving for Japan on Tuesday came to the airport to see her before departing. (AP
